```
            Bb        F                  C
If I were a carpenter,     and you were a lady
                        Bb      F                  C
Would you marry me anyway?    Would you have my baby?

          Bb          F               C
If a tinker were my trade,    would you still find me
              Bb          F            C        Bb  F  C
Carrying the pots I made,     following be-hind me?

     Bb                  C        Bb             C
  Save my love through loneliness, save my love for sorrow
                      Bb       F                    C
  I've given you my only-ness,     come, give me your to-morrow

           Bb          F              C
If I worked my hands in wood,     would you still love me?
                Bb          F             C
Answer me, babe: "yes I would,     I'd put you a-bove me"

        Bb    F              C
If I were a miller,     at a mill wheel grinding
              Bb      F                C       Bb  F  C
Would you miss your color box,     and soft shoes shining?
```
