Come closer, my love, and you'll hear my tale. It'll make you cold. It'll turn you pale.

It's a tale of a man's never ending love and a long, black rifle.

He wed a woman sworn to an-other and, in a rage, the other man

Shot him down with a long, black rifle, shot him down and a-way he ran.

A prairie man loved a city maid. Was the love he took worth the price he paid,

When the man ends up at the smoky end of a long, black rifle?

He wed a woman sworn to an-other and, in a rage, the other man

Shot him down with a long, black rifle, shot him down and a-way he ran.

p.2. The Long, Black Rifle

His dying words I re-peat to you. "You can never kill love when love is true.

It lives when only the rust is left of a long, black rifle."

He wed a woman sworn to an-other and, in a rage, the other man

Shot him down with a long, black rifle, shot him down and a-way he ran.

Shot him down and a-way he ran. Shot him down and a-way he ran.
